

GOOGLE PLAY APPEAL

App: CryptoCalk: Crypto Calculator (com.cryptocalk.calculator)

Policy: Webviews and Affiliate Spam

Suspension date: March 31, 2026

Dear Google Play Review Team,

I am writing to appeal the suspension of my application "CryptoCalk: Crypto Calculator" (package name: com.cryptocalk.calculator) for a violation of the Webviews and Affiliate Spam policy.

I believe this suspension was issued in error. I am the sole owner of both the website (cryptocalk.com) and the Android application. There is no unauthorized redistribution of third-party content.

Key Facts

1. Same owner: I, Konstantin Iakovlev, own the domain cryptocalk.com (verifiable via WHOIS) and publish the app under my company "Zainimaem.KZ." Both the website and the app are my original creation.
2. Same codebase: The website and app share the same codebase because I built both. I use Capacitor (by Ionic) to package my web application as a native Android app — a standard approach used by thousands of production apps on Google Play.
3. Original content: The app contains 69 original cryptocurrency calculators that I personally developed, covering profit/loss, mining, DCA, tax, staking, and more. All text, designs, and code are my own work.
4. No monetization abuse: The app is completely free, contains no ads, no affiliate links, and collects no user data. It exists solely as a utility tool for the crypto community.
5. Account verification: My Google Search Console verification for cryptocalk.com is under the same Google account as this Play Console, which independently confirms that the website owner and the app publisher are the same person.

Attached Documentation

- Signed Authorization Letter — confirming my ownership of both the website and the application, with evidence of domain ownership
- WHOIS record — showing cryptocalk.com registered to Konstantin Iakovlev
- Google Search Console screenshot — showing cryptocalk.com verified under this same Google account

- Hosting panel screenshot — showing cryptocalk.com hosted under Zainimaem.KZ account

I respectfully request the reinstatement of my application. I am fully available to provide any additional documentation or clarification that may be needed.

Thank you for your time and consideration.

Konstantin Iakovlev

Owner & Developer, cryptocalk.com

March 31, 2026